

the guardian

“WE WERE MEANT TO BE APART FOR TWO WEEKS...AFTER FIVE DAYS, I TOOK THE TRAIN DOWN”

WE LOVE EACH OTHER

Jane Pollard & Iain Forsyth

Jane The turning point was the first time we spent more than 48 hours apart. It was Christmas, and we were meant to be apart for two weeks, but we spoke on the phone all day every day. I don't know how he had time to make seven mix tapes and write seven letters. After five days, I took the train down. Some people blossom through independence. We're the opposite.

Iain The night we really got to know each other was at a Primal Scream show at 3am. We sat there talking. We were confused art students getting closer to collaborating. Lots of people say we're two halves of the same person. Even professionally, with our art, that's what it feels like. Craig Taylor